October 6 - 7, 2015

Delta Hotel, Fredericton, NB

It is well recognized and accepted that the forest resource offers a multitude of values and benefits, such as habitat, recreation, fibre, ecological services i.e. biodiversity, water quality, jobs and economic prosperity.

In light of today's global market place and shift in societal values and demands from the forest resource, how does the forest sector determine the right balance between timber objectives and non-timber values? What role does silviculture, more specifically, 'intensive management' play in achieving our forest management objectives? Are we allocating tighter budgets and investing in the right places, and employing the right tools?

The fall program and field trip will not only provide answers to some of these questions, but will present examples of recent silvicultural practices and associated tools & approaches, in such areas as reforestation and partial harvesting (including commercial thinning). Resulting discussion among participants will help in defining the current and future role of our silvicultural investments required to sustain the forest resource and ensure a competitive forest industry.

*The practise of silviculture is an innovative process
and continues to
evolve in order to achieve our long
term forest
management goals.*

*Watch for program and registration details later
this summer!*
